The Artistic Design of Nanjing University of the Arts dates back to the Craft and Design Department established at the Shanghai Academy of the Arts, with a long history and deep academic heritage. The design education philosophy and academic research foundation established by renowned masters and scholars such as Chen Zhen, Chen Qian, and Chen Qian laid the basis of the discipline. In 1978, the university began recruiting master's degree students, and in 1981 it was granted the authority to award master's degrees. In 1990, it began recruiting doctoral students, and in 2011 it was authorized to award doctoral and master's degrees in design. In 2012, a postdoctoral research station was established. Many famous scholars and masters in the field of design education in China have cooperated with Nanjing University of the Arts, where they have created, taught, and exchanged ideas, and have also spread the university's vision, philosophy, and research to other parts of the country.
